Re: Joan M. Cundall

pulsation in the area and minimal tenderness.

Doctor Rigby informs me that this was a retroperitoneal procedure and consequently the pelvic structures were not directly visualized. I think in light of the patient's apparent clinical improvement following her surgery, it will be wise to continue to observe her for the present time. A follow-up exam is scheduled for three months from now unless the patient's symptoms become intractable to that time.

Possibilities that still exist in my mind would be pelvic adhesions or broad ligament varicosities that may be contributing to her symptomatology. If her symptoms do intensify, then I think an exploratory laparotomy would be indicated.

I appreciate the opportunity of seeing Mrs. Cundall and will keep you informed of the course of her symptoms.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
